Frozen Garden Marketing Plan: Berry Smart

Introduction

Over the past 11 years, Frozen Garden has established itself as a "convenient meal prep and nutritional support" (PitchBook) company. Their current target market includes mothers, professionals, and people who are health conscious (Frozen Garden Case Study). This marketing plan outlines an expansion on their demographic, tapping into a whole new market, our strategies of outreach, improvement on current strategies, budget, and a tentative schedule of all the above.

Current Target Market

Frozen Garden's current target market includes: Women aged 30-55, mothers, and professionals according to "Frozen Garden Case Study". Founder Allyson Staka states in podcast Mastering Local Marketing: Sales and Marketing Strategies for Small Business Growth that there is "no super specific niche" that they have targeted and would like to try marketing to one. The only restriction that Frozen Garden has is age; they target those who are 30 and older (Mastering Local ... Business Growth).

New Target Market

When analysing Frozen Garden's target market, we recognized two main points of the product: convenience and health. With these points highlighted, we wanted to align a target market that prioritizes these qualities.

The new target market would be adults aged 55 and above who have an interest in fitness, such as being active, walking, exercising, pickleball, and more. There would also be a push to include those in assisted living facilities to showcase the convenience of the product.

There may be questions as to why we chose this audience. With the aging population and increased focus on wellness, we thought it would be a great fit for the product. Frozen Garden is also a luxury that this demographic can more easily afford compared to their younger counterparts. While everyone could benefit from eating healthier and gaining supplements, we also want to recognize that the need for micronutrients are highly needed in the older population according to Villani (2022).

Why Pickleball?

Research from (Lee Health Org website) states that senior pickleballers make up a large portion of players - “sixty percent of players are 55 or older, more than 33.7 percent are 65 or older” (Lee Health org)

Pickleball also aligns with the company desires: convenient/easy to learn, health conscious (“wellness-focused”, and inclusive for everyone.

Brand Voice and Creative Ideas

We want to embody Frozen Garden’s mission of being real food for real people. Engaging with the community, especially those who may feel disconnected, will be able to promote relationships both in and outside of the Frozen Garden audience.

The marketing for Frozen Garden will be done through inclusivity, partnerships, and light competition.

Digital Marketing

Frozen Garden is currently marketing towards women in their 30s-50s primarily through the META platforms, Facebook and Instagram. As of February 18, 2026, Frozen Garden’s Facebook page has 11k followers with 96% recommendation (36 reviews). This contrasts vastly from their Instagram page of 4,998 followers.

In the Mastering Local Marketing podcast, Founder Allyson Staka mentions that email and sms retention is an important part of Frozen Garden’s service; turning single purchase customers into repeat customers through subscriptions is one of their current tactics. According to Staka, 30% of their monthly revenue comes from email and sms.

While acknowledging the current strengths of their digital marketing, we also have to recognize their weaknesses. Their social media marketing lacks engaging content to draw their customers in as well as the consistent brand changes. With email marketing, we want to increase their statistics of recurring customers to 40%.

Social Media Marketing

As mentioned earlier, the content is the crux of the problem. When you make your brand recognizable, engagement will naturally come with. Frozen Garden has a strong brand identity that is recognizable on their website, so we are going to carry this over into social media.

After creating a consistent brand identity, we envision cross-posts on Facebook, Instagram, YouTube Shorts, and TikTok. These cross-posts would include things such as: reels, polls, promotions and offers, and more.

Integrating YouTube Shorts and TikTok allows us to leverage partnerships and UGC. These platforms are pivotal due to their ease of content sharing, reaching a new demographic, and more.

- Instagram - Reels: 15–45 sec fast-paced videos , Stories: Daily updates, polls, Q&A , Posts: High-quality photos
- Facebook - Community posts , Promotions & offers ,Events & tournaments
- YouTube shorts - 15–60 sec short videos ,Quick recipes , Fast pickleball drills , Fun food + sports mashups
- TikTok - Trends , Challenges , Quick recipes , Game highlights

Email Marketing

Email marketing geared towards customers would need minimal changes. During our planned event, which will be elaborated on later, we would have special offers for those who are aged 55 and above to compete in a pickleball competition.

From business-to-business, we would be contacting those we see fit to not only help market for us, but also provide a chance for collaborations and sponsorships. These collaborations would include assisted living spaces while the sponsorships would include Pickleball USA and pickleball equipment companies.

- Direct to Consumer
 - Senior Pickleball Athletes
- Business to Business
 - Assisted Living
 - Pickleball USA
 - Pickleball Equipment Companies

Traditional Marketing

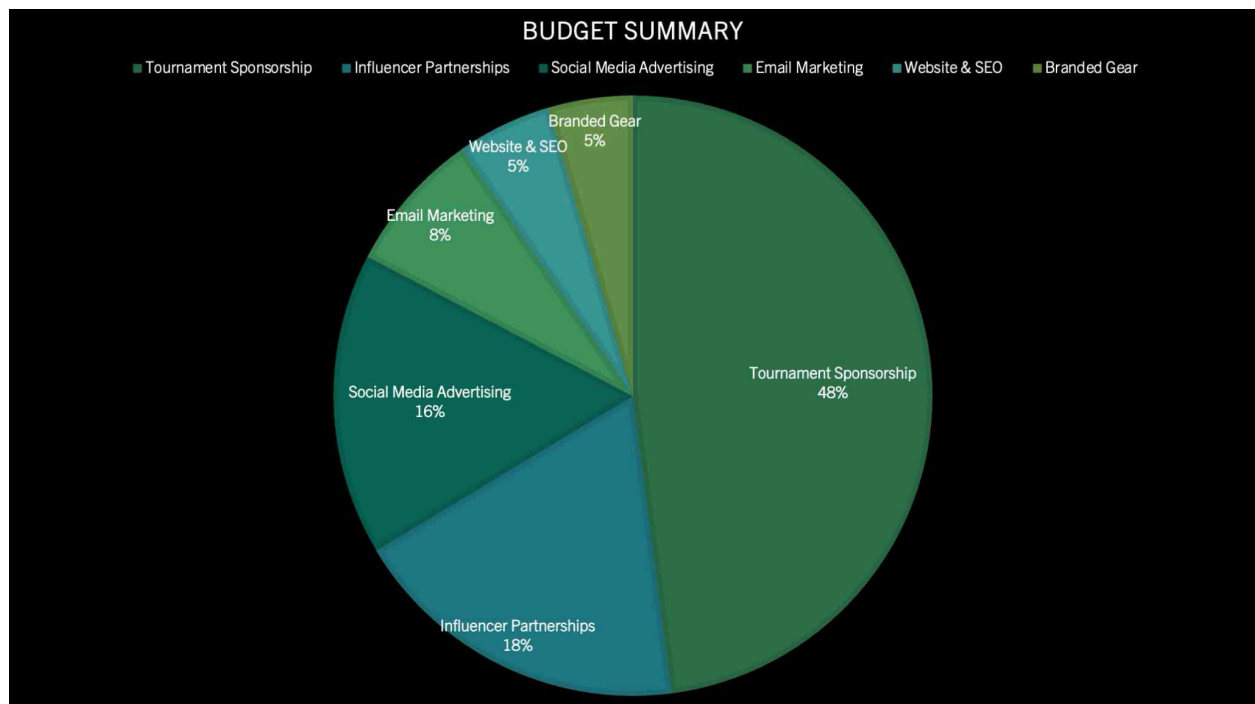

We have volleyed around the “main event” of our marketing plan. What do seniors and pickleball have to do with Frozen Garden? We raise, “Stay Out of the Kitchen”, a senior-athlete pickleball competition that will be sponsored by Frozen Garden. The goal is to promote being active and community building.

These pickleball tournaments will be 1 weekend long and televised on Frozen Garden's social media platforms. There will also be local hosts, native to the area, to increase fan attendance.

On-site testing will also be conducted throughout the weekend. A member of Frozen Garden will offer 2-3 smoothie flavors designed for the older demographic. After the taste test, participants will fill out a survey via QR code. The focus of the test is to figure out what matters most to this demographic (joint support, heart healthy, high protein, low sugar)

Budget

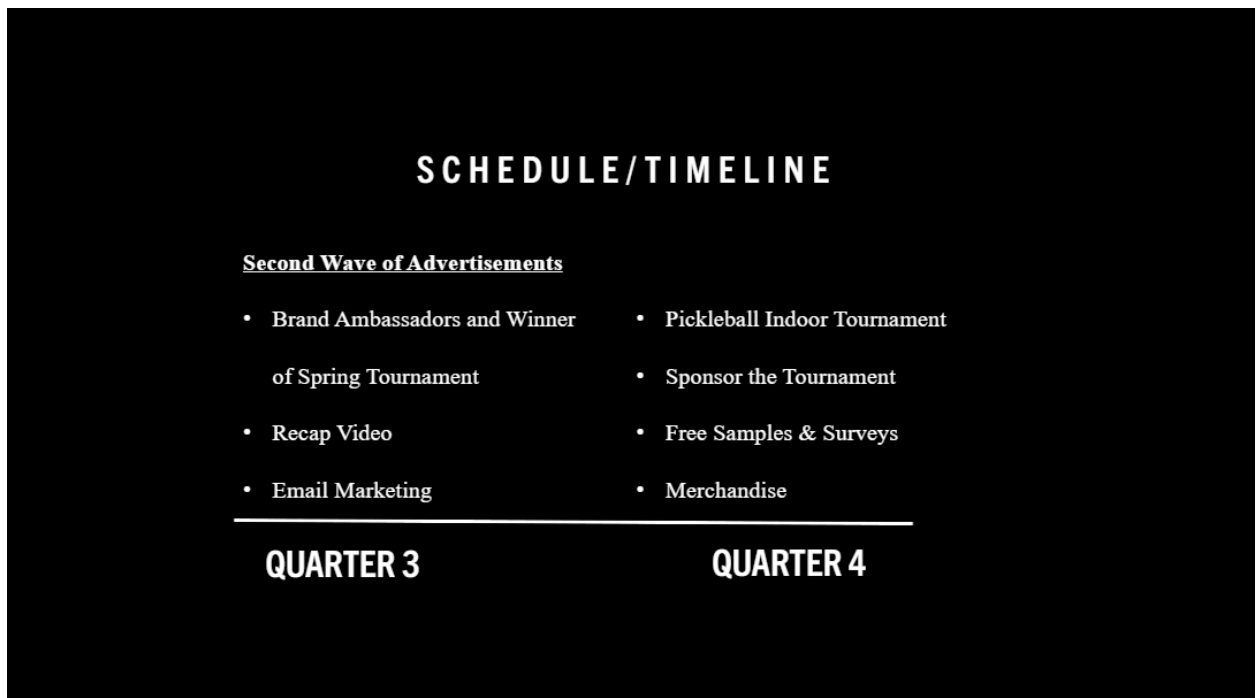

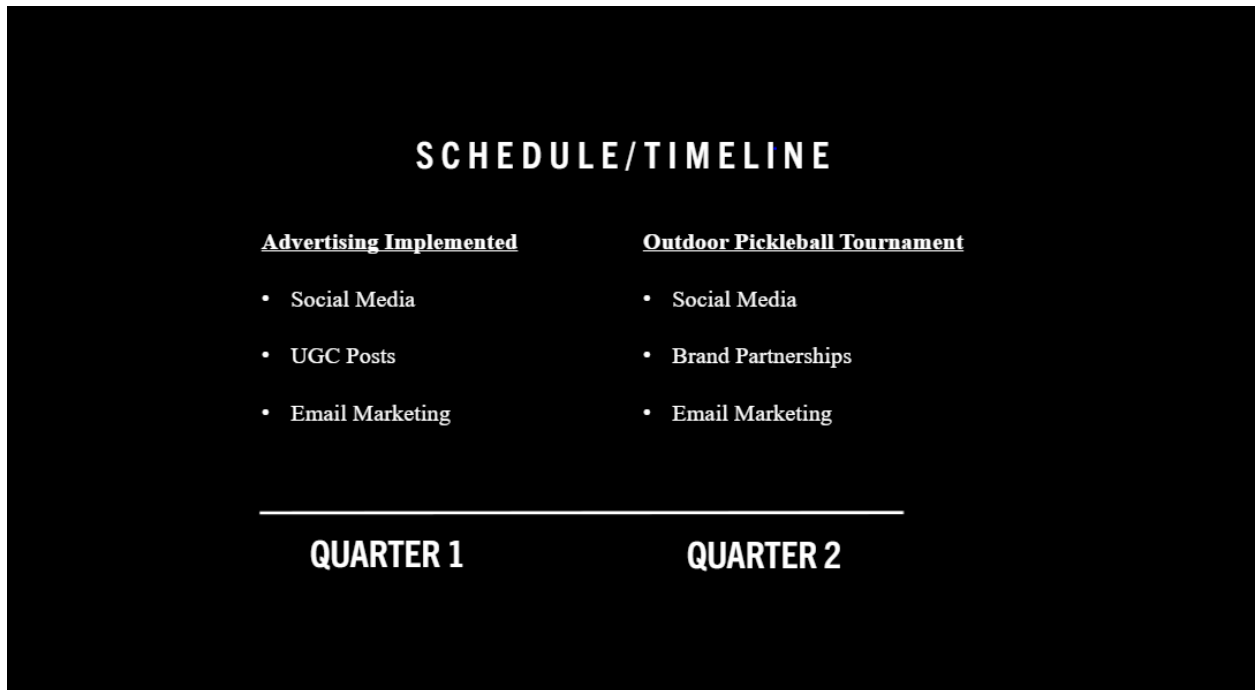

Graph of Budget Summary:

- Cost Per Lead (Paid)
- Customer Acquisition Cost (Paid)
- Organic Traffic (SEO)
- Bounce Rate (Owned)
- Cost Per Click (Paid)
- Ticket Sales (Event)
- Engagement (Social Media)

Schedule/Timeline

Conclusion

While Frozen Garden is an established convenient meal prep and nutritional support (PitchBook) company, their current weakness lies in their lack of focal marketing. With the introduction of “Get Out of the Kitchen”, we would be targeting athletic individuals aged 55 and older. With the increase of digital marketing like Instagram and Facebook, along with the pickleball event, we predict engagement and community building in Frozen Garden to correlate.
